Valley Vocational-Technical Center is in the midst of the beautiful Shenandoah Valley. It is a part of the Woodrow Wilson complex at Fishersville, Virginia. This regional center serves the vocational needs of juniors and seniors from seven area high schools which include three school divisions. Additionally, this Center serves the needs of approximately three hundred students with special needs in the Employment Training Program. These students also come from the same area high schools.

Valley Vocational-Technical Center offers many evening classes to meet the needs of five hundred - plus persons. These persons are enrolled in apprenticeship and adult educational classes.

Valley Vocational-Technical Center has twenty-seven offerings for students to select from, with industrial mechanic training being offered for the first time this year.

Horticulture consists of several sub-categories which include floriculture and landscaping maintenance. Each of these sub-categories are one-year programs. Floriculture helps develop skills in growing greenhouse plants and in floral design. Landscape maintenance helps develop skills in caring for shrubs, trees and turfgrass in the landscape setting. Furthermore, Horticulture mechanics is the ability to safely use horticulture chemicals and equipment, which is an important part of this training program.

Cosmetology is a skill that can teach individuals to develop pleasing personalities and good grooming habits. The students learn how to please different tastes and fashions. Much of the class time is consumed the first year working on each other. The remainder is used on manakins and in the classroom.

Auto Body is the repairing of the bodies of damaged or wrecked vehicles. All the projects of Auto Body are customer cars and school vehicles. An example of this is one of this year's vehicles including the VVTC van. They prepared this van for the Christmas Parade. All in all, these students are capable of entering the auto body field at the entrance level. Some have opened shops after graduating and have been very successful.

Carpentry students are taught the art of cutting, framing, and joining lumber in order to construct houses and storage buildings. This program also enables the students to learn how to safely use hand and power tools. Perhaps the most effective part of the student's learning concerning carpentry, is the first-hand experience he receives.

Industrial Mechanics is a new program for VVTC designed to train students in the fundamental principles of the maintenance and repair of industrial, commercial and domestic equipment. Emphasis will be on commercial and industrial equipment.

Some areas of instruction will cover air conditioning, refrigeration, controls, electrical principles, principles of mechanics, mechanical tools, soldering and brazing, and installation. Students will be trained to diagnose problems and make necessary repairs.

90% of all machine shop graduates are placed on a job in machine shops as machine operators, machinists apprentices and tool and die maker apprentices. Some enter the Navy Machinest School which is difficult to qualify for. Students who do well in machine shop may continue their education with advanced credit in a community college and receive a 2-year Associates degree in machine or mechanical technology.
